BOROUGH COST WILL BE $1,100

Councilman C. W. Epley's mosquito control and eradication project, approval of which was announced Friday, will get under way next week, it was announced today at the local office of the works' progress administration, Baltimore street.

A foreman, a truck driver and eight laborers will be given employment for a year by the project which traversed a rocky road before being approved by the state WPA administrator.

After the project was submitted to the local WPA office by council, Maurice Bushman, of Chambersburg, turned it down, after which Councilman Epley took the project direct to Harrisburg, where it received favorable consideration.

The position of foreman will be the first position filled. Councilman Epley has submitted the names of Councilman Emory C. Williams and J. Calvin Nau to the local WPA office for the foremanship.

As submitted by council, the project calls for a borough contribution of $1,101 for 16,000 gallons of fuel oil, three tons of lime and minor equipment. The labor cost on the project, paid by the WPA, will be in the neighborhood of $6,024.

Offers Use of Truck

Councilman Epley has already offered the borough the use of a truck for the work, although the wages of the truck driver will be made by the WPA.

The project calls for the cutting and burning of weeds on all alleys and vacant lots in Gettysburg, cleaning Rock Creek, north of the sewage treatment works, Culp's run, the Tiber and the Adams county home run, shaping the banks of those streams, spraying oil on the

Giant Craft Soaring Over Pacific on New Air Route

Alameda, Cal., Nov. 23 (AP)—Air-mail service across the Pacific ocean opened Friday night as the first of a fleet of giant sky liners thundered westward, Manila bound.

The majestic China Clipper, loaded with nearly two tons of "first-class" and official mail, gave thousands a parting thrill as it dipped under the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge cables in the take-off. The cables are only about 300 feet above the water.

Spectators gasped at the feat Pan American Airways' officials said the huge flying boat made the dip for the benefit of watching school children.

Makes Mile Run

The silver-winged sky queen started a mile run on the bay at 3:47 P. M., Pacific Standard Time (6:47 P. M. Gettysburg time) dipped under the bridge cables and skimmed on through the Golden Gate.

Anchored near the Golden Gate for the occasion was a clipper ship of other days, the Star of New Zealand.

The China Clipper's first scheduled stop is Honolulu, 2,400 miles away, which it is expected to reach in about eighteen hours. It will touch Midway, Wake and Guam Islands en route to Manila. Later the line will be extended to China.

James A. Farley, Postmaster-General, who read a message from President Roosevelt, gave the take-off order after J. E. Tripp, president of the Pan American Airways, reported the China Clipper was ready for service under the mail contract.

Clipper Skims Away

Mr. Tripp then relayed the order to Captain Edwin C. Musick aboard the craft, and the Clipper, an American flag rippling from its cockpit, skimmed away.

Almost at the same time, the second of the sky fleet, the Philippine Clipper, arrived at Acapulco, Mexico, from Miami, on its way here to enter the same service.

"Please convey to the people of the Pacific Coast," said the President's message, "the deep interest and heartfelt congratulations of an air-minded sailor. Even at this distance I thrill at the wonder of it all."

Mr. Farley said the undertaking marked the beginning "of the greatest and most significant achievement in the marvelous and fascinating development of air transportation."

Letter Sent To Quezon

A letter from President Roosevelt to President Manuel Quezon, of the new Philippine Commonwealth, was handed by Mr. Farley to Mr. Musick.

Mr. Farley announced the China Clipper's mail load brought a profit of $47,000 to the Postoffice Department. The Postoffice gross revenue from the 115,000 letters carried, he said, was $63,000, and the maximum cost $15,000.

Part of the mail was delivered to the clipper by an old-fashioned stage coach.

The clipper carried much of her return-mail cargo as well.

A portion of the mail will be dropped at Honolulu and returned to the mainland by steamship.

A new 25-cent airmail stamp was issued in San Francisco and Washington Friday in connection with the flight. A series of stamps consisting of the new Commonwealth issue overprinted for the

"Babes in Wood" Were Found Year Ago in Mountains

A year ago today, two caretakers on a Cumberland county estate, stumbling about the scrub timber slopes of Penn Township mountains, made the discovery which opened the "Babes in the Woods" case, a murder mystery which swept the nation.

A granite boulder and bronze tablet mark the grave of the three children above a rectangular plot in a cemetery near Carlisle. Funds to save the children from a pauper's grave were donated voluntarily from persons in many states of the country under the auspices of the Carlisle Post of the American Legion.

Since the time of the children's burial, the burial plot has been decorated every week with flowers placed there by unknown donors.

WARN HUNTERS ABOUT KILLING DEER THIS YEAR

Antlerless Deer Season Follows Regular Shooting Season, December 12.

URGES GUNNERS TO WEAR RED

Hunters may not kill antlerless deer during the regular buck season nor may they kill bucks during the antlerless deer season, according to W. C. Shaffer, acting executive secretary of the board of game commissioners, who, in an announcement today clarified this and other questions which have not been clear to many hunters.

The antlerless deer season begins December 2 and closes December 11, during which period only male deer having two or more points to the antler may legally be taken.

The antlerless deer season begins December 12 and closes December 14, during which only antlerless deer may legally be taken.

Spike bucks are protected at all times.

Only One Kill

An individual may kill only one deer, either a legal buck or an antlerless deer. He may not kill one of each as some hunters suppose.

The counties open to antlerless deer include Bradford, Cameron, Centre, Clearfield, Clinton, Elk, Forest, Lycoming, McKean, Pike, Potter, Sullivan, Tioga, and Warren.

A hunter who kills an antlerless deer must keep it regardless of its size or weight. Any attempt to evade this regulation will make a hunter liable to immediate prosecution.

A camp or hunting party which has not taken its camp limit of six during the buck season may complete their limit with antlerless deer in any of the counties open to antlerless deer.

"Wear Some Red"

Antlerless deer must be reported to the board of game commissioners within 72 hours after killing. Cards for this purpose were handed out with the 1935 hunting license.

HIGH SCHOOL'S ANNEX PROJECT GETS APPROVAL

First Advertisement For Bids Will Be Published in Times On Monday.

WILL COMPLETE WORK BY SEPT. 1

Harrisburg, Nov. 23 (AP)—State headquarters of the Works Progress administration approved today the plans and specifications for an addition to Gettysburg high school.

The federal government granted $42,750 for the project, and the school district will contribute $52,250.

Approval of the specifications had been delayed while architects made minor technical changes.

WPA officials said the project will be advertised in Gettysburg today or Monday. After three weeks' advertisement bids will be opened and construction started.

Start Work Soon

Gettysburg's new high school annex, or addition to the present structure, costing $95,000 will be constructed in time for the opening of the 1936-37 school term, Professor Lloyd C. Keefe, superintendent of schools and Dr. C. G. Crist, president of the school board, said today.

Approval of the project by Harrisburg, after several months delay during which insignificant and minor yet necessary details, were corrected or changed, brought gratification among school board members and school officials here today.

The new addition will be in keeping with the construction of the present structure and will be a valuable and necessary adjunct to the school system and facilities of Gettysburg.

The present high school is inadequate to properly accommodate the steadily increasing enrollment in the local school and Professor Keefe and Principal Leffer have been hard pressed to care and accommodate the pupils while complying with the strict regulations of the state department of public instruction.

Advertise on Monday

The federal grant of $42,750 represents 45 per cent of the total cost of the new addition. Fifty-five per cent is paid by the school district.

Under the present set-up the federal grant is not to exceed $42,750. This amount may not be required if the addition does not reach a total of $95,000. Whatever the cost of the addition the federal government will pay forty-five per cent.

CLASS IN FIRST AID ENROLLS 22; WORK IS PRAISED

Others Are Expected To Join; Classes Begin December 2.

GETTYSBURG IS GIVEN HONORS

Twenty-two persons have been enrolled in the Red Cross first-aid institute to be conducted here, December 2 to 13, inclusive, by Commodore W. E. Longfellow, of Washington, D. C. Miss Margaret McMillan, secretary of the local Red Cross chapter, announced today.

Organizations represented by the enrollees include the Gettysburg battlefield guides' association, the Metropolitan Edison company, the United telephone company, the state highway department, Gettysburg college, the state highway patrol and the Cannon shoe factory, McSherrytown.

Although a maximum enrollment of 35 was set for the training school, Commodore Longfellow has notified Miss McMillan that if there are a few more he will be able to accommodate them.

The institute will be held five evenings a week for two weeks, from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Those who complete the course will become instructors for the first-aid stations the Red Cross hopes to establish on Adams county highways.

The Pennsylvania link in the nationwide chain of Red Cross highway first-aid stations has already taken form here with a meeting last week at the court house.

In addition to the roadside stations, the state highway patrolmen will receive instruction in first-aid. This was agreed upon at a conference of Capt. P. J. Dorr, of the motor patrol, and Harry A. Kenning, who addressed the meeting here. Destruction of the 700 patrolmen will start December 16.

Gettysburg and Waynesboro have been selected as the first communities in Pennsylvania in the vicinity of which highway first-aid stations will be established, according to the national headquarters of the Red Cross in Washington.

Earle Praises Work In a statement Governor Earle voiced high praise of the efforts the Red Cross is making to reduce the appalling number of accidents which occur annually in the United States. He said:

"The American Red Cross is now entering on a nation-wide campaign to reduce the terrible toll of accidental deaths and injuries in the home, on the farm and on highways.

"Plans are under way whereby local chapters of the American Red Cross will establish highway first-aid stations at thousands of strategic points throughout the country in an effort to reduce the frightful toll of those killed and injured in highway accidents. Last year 36,000 persons were killed, 105,000 were permanently crippled and 1,255,000 were injured. This movement alone calls for the united and whole-hearted support of every citizen. One never knows when such service may save his own life or the life of one near and dear to him."

SHOOT COACH AT RALLY

Cabinetmaker Then Turns Gun on Himself; Son Was Dismissed.

Lake Charles, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—Angered because his son had been dismissed from the football team, R. A. Russell, a cabinet maker, invaded the Lake Charles High School Friday and shot P. S. Killen, the football coach, then shot himself.

Killen was in the school auditorium conducting a pep meeting for Friday's game. Russell had him summoned to a hallway, where he shot him.

Both men were wounded critically. Russell had nursed a grudge against the coach for a year, following dismissal of his son, Clifford, from the team. Bystanders said Killen came from the auditorium in response to Russell's summons, walked up to him and extended his hand in a friendly gesture. Russell began firing. The first two shots went wild. The third entered Killen's abdomen. The fourth, Russell fired into his own head.

Pandemonium broke out in the auditorium, crowded with students. Russell collapsed and Killen walked out of the building to an automobile and was driven to a hospital. There it was determined the bullet had clipped the tip of the coach's heart.

FINDS HUNTER DEAD IN CABIN

Unemployed Yorker Kills Self In Cottage Near Pine Grove Furnace.

The body of Donald Spence, 21, of York, shot to death, was found Friday afternoon in a hunting cabin near Pine Grove Furnace in the South Mountains.

Coroner E. A. Haegele pronounced the case a suicide and said no inquest would be necessary. He said Spence had been unemployed.

William M. Stair, of 444 Lincoln street, York, a member of a hunting party, found Spence's body on his return from a day in the woods. He told Coroner Haegele that Spence had accompanied him and some companions on a hunting trip Thursday, but that Spence decided to stay in the cabin.

Stair said he saw Spence on a cot when he returned and thought he was asleep. He said he changed clothes and then called to Spence but received no reply. He said he found a pistol in Spence's right hand and a bullet in his head.

Spence was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spence, of West Maple street, York.

Woodmont Wild Turkeys Fall for "Amos and Andy"

Hancock, Md., Nov. 23 (AP)—"Amos and Andy" went hunting Friday and proved themselves "kingfishers" at shooting. They bagged two wild turkeys each, the limit in ducks and a number of pheasants.

The two comedians, Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, with Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Herbert Hoover, were guests of Henry P. Bridges, secretary at the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club here.

Entertained at Dinner

They arrived here Thursday night, went shooting Friday and left after dinner for an engagement in Washington. They were delighted with the results of their hunting.

"I never have experienced anything like it before," Gosden said. "We each got two wild turkeys, the limit in ducks and some pheasants." Gosden said Correll also was delighted with the "grandest hunting" they ever had seen.

"The only trouble with him," he said, "is that his shoulder is so sore he can hardly move it."

Regular organization leaders, however, frequently have asserted their support of all phases of the New Deal.

"We went into the State organization to foster a liberal movement," said Cecil Burney, a member of the student faction, "but the state super-structure is not liberal. It is made up of job hunters."

Joe Bailey Humphreys, leader of the rebel State Rights Democrats, termed the Young Democrats "a job-holding association" and accused its executives of "desperately attempting to cinch a place at the pork barrel."

The progressives said they would work to elect President Roosevelt and endorsed the New Deal, but Humphreys charged "the Democratic platform has been ignored and the New Deal has betrayed the party."

QUIZ BRIDE IN MAN'S MURDER

17-Year-Old Bride Questioned In Slaying; Claims "Just Friends."

New York, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP)—Rockland county authorities sifted conflicting rumors Friday of the friendship between Mary Swope Philpot, 17-year-old bride, and 24-year-old Le Roy Smith, farm youth who was found slain here Thursday.

The girl denied that Smith was her suitor.

"We were just friendly," police reported she had said throughout the questioning.

George V. Dorsey, District Attorney, said he was investigating a story that Frank Smith, 15-year-old brother of the dead man, had reported Le Roy was the recipient three weeks ago of a "threat."

Suicide Theory Dropped Dorsey said a suicide theory had been eliminated.

An examination showed that although Smith's sweater and shirt had been punctured by a 32-caliber bullet which penetrated the heart, the leather jerkin on the body bore neither bullet hole nor powder burn.

The prosecutor hoped to identify finger prints on a revolver found 25 or 30 feet from Smith's body in a field about 100 yards from the Colonial home of the girl.

Questioned by county, State and New York city police were the girl, her husband, his friend, Carl Stottley and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Salaman, mother and stepfather of Mary.

Bride Reported Estranged

Dorsey pursued the theory that some one may have taken exception to Smith's attentions to the girl, who is reported estranged from her 19-year-old husband.

The girl, descendant of old Hudson Valley stock, told him she had last seen Smith between 8:30 and 9 p. m. Saturday, when he dined at her home.

The prosecutor earlier had said he wanted to question a young woman with whom Smith was said to have been keeping company.

Neighbors here referred to the slain youth as the "Don Juan" of the community. The girl bride eloped last February with Philpot in Cincinnati. An annulment was threatened by the bride's mother, but proceedings were not started.

DANGER HELD IN DEATH OF MATE

Blond Carnival Entertainer Admits Killing Common-Law Husband.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 23 (AP)—Betty White, 24, slender platinum blond carnival dancer, is held in the Norfolk city jail without bond on the charge of murdering her common-law husband, William Williams, about 34, carnival operator, shortly after 5 o'clock Friday morning in their hotel room.

In an interview a few hours later, Detective Leon Nowitzky, blaming her act on a series of beatings by Williams, which culminated with an argument over cigarette smoke a few minutes before the fatal shot was fired.

"How do you feel after killing Williams?" the detective said he asked her.

"I feel better than I felt in months, so help me God," she is said to have replied. "I couldn't live with him and I couldn't live without him."

Waives Preliminary Hearing

In police court the girl waived preliminary hearing through her attorney, Harry Nicholson, and was ordered held for the Corporation court grand jury which convenes December 2.

Six other members of the same carnival group which Williams headed were ordered held under $300 bond each as material witnesses. Unable to raise bail, the likewise were in jail.

Members of this group were Howell Cobb Vandiver, 32, of Greenville, S. C., a native of Georgia, who says he was in Williams' room at the time he was shot; Albert Leo Aldrich, 28, and his wife, Janet Alma Aldrich, 22, of Pittsburgh; Virginia Belle Rouse, 19, of Scotts Bluff, Neb.; Jack Duke King, of Los Angeles, California and John Monti, 27, of Rhode Island.

Reported in Williams' Room

Williams and the woman, known to other members of the company as "Bunnie" Williams, arrived in Norfolk about a week ago to make advance preparations for the early opening here of their show. Other members of the company arrived at 4 o'clock this morning after a trip some of them described at 1,200 miles long.

The newly arrived members of the troupe reported in Williams' room on arrival. At the time of the shooting Aldrich had just left the room and Vandiver was preparing to go, they said.

Williams complained about there being too much smoke in the room. Vandiver said in police court, whereupon "Bunnie" blew a mouthful of smoke in Williams' face and Vandiver went to the window sill to "duck" his cigarette. While his back was turned, Vandiver said, he heard several blows passed between the two, heard a shot fired and turned to see "Bunnie" running from the room with Williams stumbling after her.

Shot in Left Breast

Shot through the left breast with a 32-caliber automatic, the showman staggered a few feet and collapsed outside the door. He lived approximately twenty minutes, and died en route to St. Vincent's hospital in a police radio car.

Informed at the hotel desk that "Bunnie," or Betty White, had fled in negligence, minus shoes of hat, Detective Ben R. Dove went to the Hotel Norfolk, several doors away and discovered her in the closet of a room occupied by John Monti, another member of the troupe.

Chapter 44

MUDDY ROAD

"It was then I sent for Miss Farnsworth," said John Neuman, "knowing she was the legal owner of the canneries."

"You might tell Anne how you found the other evidence," suggested Kellogg.

"The—was easy," John smiled; "every fisherman on the waters was interested in freeing her. Bit by bit they brought in little things and by piecing them together we built up the true story of what had happened. And of course I called for Judge Kellogg as soon as I learned Miss Anne had been charged."

"Why didn't you bring this evidence to me?" the district attorney asked.

John faced the man soberly. "I should have done that," he acknowledged, "but it's an old Finnish custom to trust no one while he's in the enemy's camp. I wanted to wait and let Kellogg tell you. I felt his word would have more weight than a fisherman's."

There was a knock at the door. When the district attorney came back he turned to Anne. "Mrs. Lee Farnsworth wants to talk to you."

Mrs. Farnsworth stepped into the room, smiled at Anne, and with open arms came across to her.

Anne watched Charlotte approach her, and stepped back from the outstretched arms.

"Dear little niece," she began, "you don't know my relief at finding you not guilty of that dastardly deed. Oh, we've grieved so over you."

"Thank you, Mrs. Farnsworth," said Anne.

"Aunt Charlotte, dear."

"You asked me once not to call you that," Anne counted. "I'm the same girl now that I was then."

"I was distraught, the tragic death of those two loved ones and everything at such odds. You'll forgive me, Anne?"

"It doesn't matter," Anne turned away, then after a moment turned back, "and I'm terribly sorry about Uncle Lee. I love him, truly."

"You're coming home with us now, Anne, right back to your own little rooms and maybe we can find Yvonne."

"That is your home," Anne countered, and turned to Tecla and John. "My home is with my people."

"But my dear girl," Mrs. Farnsworth's sweetness was vanishing, "you can't pretend you can handle everything yourself. You come home with us and we'll take care of you. Rob can go right on taking care of the canneries, because you must admit, Anne, that a mere girl can't handle the business. Don't you think I'm right?" she appealed to the men in the room.

There was only silence to answer her question, until at last Anne went to the district attorney's desk, asked for pen and paper, sat down and wrote industriously.

"Will you sign this please, Judge Kellogg?" she asked.

"Gladly," agreed her friend after glancing over it, and scrawled his name on the paper.

Mrs. Farnsworth took the paper and read it aloud:

"To Robert Crocker:

"Your immediate resignation from any and all positions you now hold in the Farnsworth Fisheries, Incorporated, will be acceptable to the present owner. (Signed) Anne Farnsworth, Owner."

"Why, you young snip," Charlotte Farnsworth's poise had left her, "do you think you can do a thing like this while there are courts of law in this land?"

"I'm depending upon the justice of those courts," Anne answered calmly. Then she turned to the others. "May I go home now?"

She paused and realized the last time she had made that remark was two months ago, before the doors of the jail clanged shut behind her.

"I've my car here," offered Kellogg.

"Then will you drive Tecla home, and give her lots of money? We're going to have a festival and I want everyone in Union Town there. Buy lots of food and coffee, everything they like. And Tecla, tell Lisa she has her job back, and if any of the fishermen reach there before I get home, tell them I'll try to make up to them for what they lost this last summer."

"And you?" asked Angel Kellogg.

"John and I are going to walk home," she smiled as everyone echoed, "walk." "You don't know how good it will seem to walk along without bumping into bars."

With John she escaped from the courthouse through a rear door, then silently they plodded along through the gathering twilight.

For a while Anne was content with the joy of walking, of taking long steps, swinging her arms, breathing deep and looking up with nothing to obscure her gaze of the sky, a sky mottled with the faint ambering gray of the clouds. And then there seemed the necessity of words.

"John," she ventured, "remember the night I first came down here and Tecla met me at the door? Do you remember how she acted and what she said?"

"Yes," he assented, "she said 'Annikki, Enkeli.' She thought she was seeing the ghost of your father's twin sister, whose name was Annikki, and for whom you were named. However," he added, "I didn't know it at the time."

"Let's take the old road over the hill top, the one that comes down in back of my house," Anne suggested, as they neared a cross street.

"It may be muddy," John murmured.

"I'd like that," she confessed, "after these weeks of walking on the highly antiseptic floors of hospitals and jails I'd like some nice brown gumbo on my shoes."

"John," as they turned up a shrub lined road, "why did Rob Crocker have the revolver oiled and buy the cartridges, if Tom was the one who was going to use it?"

"I imagine Tom was cunning enough to provide that alibi. If the revolver hadn't been found and identified as Luke Farnsworth's, he couldn't have been connected with the shooting. To me, Nikki, it proves premeditation. He can say what he pleases about merely having it handy for protection of the canneries, I believe he hoped to find you alone, sooner or later."

Anne shuddered, looked at the dense bushes growing along the roadside, and drew closer to John.

"You needn't worry, now," he assured her, "Tom was taken to jail right away and he won't be allowed out on bail."

"And Rob?"

"Arreste dby the federals as he left the courthouse. They've succeeded in connecting him with the bootleg trap. The men working on the legal traps were willing to insist they were owners, but those on the bootleg trap confessed in the hope of getting immunity."

"Poor Sharlee," mused Anne, and John looked down at her with a queer smile.

"You're generous," he commented. "But she wasn't to blame for anything. With a mother like Charlotte, how could she have been different? John, I believe I'll see that she and Aunt Mabel take a trip abroad to forget."

"And Charlotte?"

"As Lisa says, 'drat her.' My generosity stops there. I believe she's as guilty as Rob or Tom. She should be spending the balance of her days in the Salem penitentiary, also."

"Nikki," they had reached the top of the hill and were looking down on Union Town, looking out on the Pacific. Behind them night was crowding over the hills, but out there the afterglow still smudged the horizon with topaz. "Nikki, I won't be far from Salem, after this week."

Anne felt her breath catch, a pain stab at her heart. "What do you mean?" she asked.

"I'm going to Corvallis. Had a wire from the coach—he wants me to come down and take over the junior teams."

"And your boat—" she stopped short. There wouldn't be any trawler, because John had probably spent his money saving her from prison; perhaps that was why she had received such special care at the hospital. It hadn't occurred to her to ask who had paid the bills for all of the service she had received.

She looked at John. So, like Rob, he was going away, going to leave her to face her new problems alone. Only she knew why he was going.

He had taken the soft hat from his head and was standing, looking out to the sea, the fine features set in grim, hopeless lines.

ITALY RESENTS U.S. OIL ACTION

300 Italian Soldiers and Three Officers Reported Killed In Battle.

(By The Associated Press)

The U. S. found itself in the line of fire from Italian reprisals against "sanctionist" countries.

As the "first real fighting on any scale since the war began" was reported from the Ethiopian capital, Fascists in Rome expressed open suspicion of the call issued on the American oil industry by the Washington government to halt shipments to Italy and Ethiopia.

Commentators gave added significance to the move by Secretary Ickes, that the Interior department so far as the effectiveness of international sanction against Italy were concerned, in light of the cutting off of oil shipments to Italy by Soviet Russia.

The battle reported from Addis Ababa occurred November 12, north of Majkale, inside the Italian front line, a government communique said. 300 Italian soldiers and 3 Italian officers were slain by Ethiopians. One colonel was listed among those killed.

The battle occurred in the Womberta region.

That a major engagement is yet to occur, however, was indicated in advices to the Rome government which said northern Ethiopian bands, routed by Fascists, were believed to be reassembling deeper in the interior to continue resistance.

On the diplomatic front the "eye-for-an-eye" principle, was enunciated by the Italian government in viewing the efforts of the American government to lend added strength to efforts to end the war by outside pressure upon Italy.

Italian engineers conceded that if other non-sanctionist nations followed the U. S. lead Italy's fuel and lubricant problem would become serious. Italy viewed with coolness efforts by France and England to reach an amicable basis for peace in conversations in Paris.

cially pronounced his name.

The godparents were King George and Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, Prince Nicholas of Greece, the baby's maternal grandfather, and Prince Arthur of Connaught, substituting for his father, the Duke of Connaught.

And it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreaded: and, behold, he stood by the river.

And, behold, there came up out of the river seven well favoured kine and fat-fleshed; and they fed in a meadow.

And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and lean-fleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.

And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good.

And, behold, seven thin ears and blasted with the east wind sprang up after them.

And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

And it came to pass in the morning that his spirit was troubled: and he sent and called for all the magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof; and Pharaoh told them his dream; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

Pharaoh was wrought with his servants, and put me in a ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

And we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

And there was with us a young man, a Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.—Genesis 41:1-13.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

LET THE LIGHT IN

A DUNGEON mind cannot live long. The mind must have light. People are healthier today than they were when I was a boy—at least it seems to me that they are. I recall that the blinds of so many homes were always closed—and opened only on special occasions. Now we use blinds on our homes only for decoration—and they are left open on the sides.

The years keep teaching us that light is life—that we must have it in plenty and that the sun is the great healer for the body. We grow healthy upon fruits and vegetables that have kissed the sun.

Theodore Roosevelt once stated that he never read a book that he knew in advance would end unhappily. For myself I like the "art" to a piece of literature that leaves a happy feeling inside of one's mind. There is plenty of grief and sorrow in the world without painting pictures of it.
I like to see a play upon the stage that sends me home with inspiring sensations creeping through me.

Sordid plays and literature class themselves with the dungeon mind that lacks the sun to give them freshness, youth, and hope.

A glorious orchestra, a thrilling baseball or football game, a refreshing human being, like Will Rogers, who was eternally the ambassador of good will and cheer, gardens filled with beautiful flowers that give their fragrance freely to all—clean of weeds—these are the things that lend light to the mind and make this world a good place in which to live.

No one likes to listen to tales of woe. They darken the mind. With plenty of light the destructive forces of life have no chance. Let the light in.

Let the light of ideas into your mind. Despise nothing that can give you light. Seek all sides. You can see all sides with all the light possible streaming about. Ignorance is darkness of mind. Intelligence is light in the mind—always seeking more light.

We see everything that is worth seeing with light flooding everything.
The open mind is the one with all the windows wide open.

Tots have a way of getting in draughts, and sitting on cold floors when engrossed in play. Mothers who realize this should make up a

She's a wise young business woman or housewife who dons this slip on as one, two, three, and just as easy to make, for its cut-in-one yoke and sleeve is a grand workroomier or more comfortable. The promising young artist will also fa-love its little-boy collar and prac-

EDGAR A. GUEST

HER EXTRAVAGANCE

I knew her wants were many and I knew her means were small.
I knew she had to pinch and scrape to get along at all.
So passing by this morning it seemed a curious thing
To find her in the garden planting tulips for the spring.

Now tulips aren't expensive, but beyond the slightest doubt They are little bits of beauty one could really live without.
And the shawl was thin upon her and her bonnet worn and frayed.
And those tulips meant a saving which I thought she could have made.

She guessed what I was thinking for she seemed to hang her head;
And "we all have some extravagance," exclaiming she said.
"Some people squander money on their appetites and some Indulge themselves in pleasures from which only sorrows come.

"I shall wear my shawl this winter and I'll make my bonnet do.
If I suffer for my folly I can smile and brave it through.
We all have whims and notions unto which through life we cling.
And my weakness is for tulips, red and yellow, in the spring."

LITTLE ORPHANS OF THE WAR

More than 100,000 world war babies" born during 1914 have been called to the colors of France.—
News Item.

Little orphans of the war! Do you not recall the phrase?
It was ever on our lips in those terror-stricken days.
And our voices used to break as we spoke of them back then, Pledging them our solemn word war should never come again.

Little orphans of the war! and their fathers lying dead Underneath some wooden cross where the battle zone was spread!
Little orphans of the war, one and twenty years ago Unto whom we gave our word that a peaceful world they'd know!

Can so swiftly fly the years and our vows so little mean That today they march them off, like the dads they've never seen?

Little orphans of the war! Must the statesmen now explain
As again they sound the call, that their fathers died in vain?
Only yesterday it seems we had pity for them all!
Only yesterday we sobbed for the helpless children small!
Such a little while ago 'twas for peace we knelt to pray.
Now those orphans of the war garb-ed as soldiers march away.

RECREATE BODYWoman, Dead Ten Months, To Be Returned to Life, Says Believer.

Blanding, Utah, Nov. 23 (AP)— Members of a strange cult, isolated on the arid slopes of Southeastern Utah, are waiting the fulfillment of the ritual to restore to life Mrs.
Edith Pashal, who died 10 months ago.

"The re-creation will be soon now," a reporter for a Salt Lake City newspaper quoted Mrs. Marie
M. Ogden, leader of the group, self-styled the "Home of Truth," after an interview.

Daily the unburied body of Mrs.
Pashal is bathed in salt water. For three months members of the cult have been watching the "re-creation," Mrs. Ogden said.

No one is permitted to see the body, which lies in a closely guarded building at Photograph Gap, near Blanding. The State Health Department recently was forced to obtain a court order to inspect it and make sure it was not a menace to public health.

"I cannot tell you just when she will come back," said Mrs. Ogden, who, with her husband and three other members of the cult, carry out the daily ritual. "That is in the future, just like the coming of the Master."

"Her return to full life must be gradual as was her disintegration period."

Mrs. Ogden said she was conscious of a living presence in the dead woman. "I speak with her almost daily," she said. "Of course, this is in soul language."

When the "resurrection is completed," Mrs. Ogden expects rapid success for the "Home of Truth."

"We expect to grow by leaps and bounds next year, for there are many people who will be coming,"
she said.

Plans have been drawn for a chapel that will seat a thousand worshippers, which she expects to throng up the slope of the "Home of Truth" when they understand

"the process of rebirth."

WED ON HORSEBACK.
BRIDEGROOM IS GIVEN
3 YEARS FOR BIGAMY

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—
George M. Van Horn, 30, of Washington, married on horseback last July to Miss Rose Wallace, of Washington, pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy in corporation court Thursday and was sentenced to three years in the state penitentiary.

Van Horn was indicted earlier in the day by a special grand jury. The charge was brought by Ethel Mae Nagle Van Horn, of Baltimore, his first wife.

FORBIDDEN INDEFINITELY
TO ACT AS PROSECUTOR

Hartford, N. C., Nov. 23 (AP).—
W. H. Edwards, prosecuting attorney of Perquimans county recorder's court, has been forbidden indefinitely to appear as prosecutor by order of Judge Walter H. Oakley, Jr., who said Edwards' behavior had reflected discredit on the court.

The order, signed Tuesday, asserted that on November 12 Edwards was so intoxicated that it was necessary to recess court without completing its business.

Edwards appealed to the superior court. Pending action on the appeal, Silas Whedbee was appointed acting prosecutor.

AMUSEMENTS
MAJESTIC
"Hands Across the Table" comes to the Majestic Theatre, Monday and Tuesday.
In place of her customary gorgeously gowned sophisticated lady characterizations, Carole Lombard portrays a poor, but attractive and ambitious maniac. Fred MacMurray is a penniless young playboy. Ralph Bellamy appears as a wealthy but invalid suitor of Miss Lombard. Marie Prevost is seen in a character comedy part, and Ruth Donnelly also portrays a comedy role.
The story of "Hands Across the Table" centers around the determination and efforts of Miss Lombard to catch a rich husband. Love does not enter her scheme of things as her one desire is to marry money. As a manicurist in a beauty parlor in a swanky Manhattan hotel she meets Bellamy, wealthy but a cripple as the result of a plane crash, who takes an instant liking to her. Into her life comes also MacMurray, young socialite who takes her night clubbing and subsequently misses his boat to Bermuda.
After confessing that the trip was bought by his prospective millionaire father-in-law, he asks Miss Lombard to put him up at her apartment until he can "return" from his holiday. The two make an agreement that they will carry out their plans to marry a bankroll. Their plans develop just as they hoped until they both suddenly find themselves in love, and with each other!

Young Interne's Throat Is Slashed by Patient

Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—Day after day internes at the Graduate hospital have pricked the fingers of 81-year-old Salvatore Tarsatana, drawing off small quantities of blood for testing.
"They steal my blood," the old man sometimes muttered in Italian. "Some day I take theirs."
Friday he made good his threat. Arising from his bed in a free ward with agility and strength surprising for his age, he drew a revolver and slashed the throat of a 28-year-old interne who planned to take his blood pressure.
The victim, Dr. Sebron Dale, graduate of Tulane university, whose home is in Prentiss, Mississippi, today is in a critical condition. His severed jugular had been clipped together. Five internes gave blood to rally him.
After hours of doubt, Dr. Donald C. Smelzer, director of the hospital, last night said the interne was showing signs of improvement.
"He has a chance for life," he said.
Suffers from Jaundice
It was just after 11 a. m. when the man, suffering from jaundice and other ailments developing from age, demanded blood for blood.
He had arisen from bed, according to Patrick Kennelly, Jr., of 4144 Robbins avenue, who occupied the cot next to his. From a nearby cabinet, he extracted his razor. Then he stalked into the corridor outside.
It was just the right moment for the parchment-faced old man. Outside he met Dr. Dale, carrying his stethoscope and blood pressure apparatus.
"Come on, Salvatore," the interne said kindly. "Get back into bed. We're going to examine you."
Springs at Doctor
He walked on ahead of the old man. In that instant, Tarsatana sprang. From the folds of a robe he whipped the razor. A great slash caught the interne behind the ear, then ripped down through the jugular. The blade broke, imbedding itself near the collar bone.
Dr. Dale stumbled, righted himself, then, his hands clutching shut the gaping wound in his throat, he ran 200 feet down a corridor and collapsed in the arms of other internes.
Meanwhile, calmly, the old man walked back to his bed, and put away the bloody remains of the razor. Dispassionately he turned to Kennelly.
"I kill," he said simply.
"Whom did you kill?" gasped the alarmed Kennelly.
All Tarsatana said was:
"The doc!"
Worried at Police Station
Then he sat on his cot and buried his head in his hands. It was in that attitude that hospital attendants found him. He had hardly changed when police came.
But, when he arrived in 12th and Pine streets station, clad only in night clothing and a blanket, he expressed worry about clothing. A son, Anthony, of 249 S. 58th street, brought clothing a little later, at the same time expressing the opinion his father was off balance, mentally.
To Dr. William T. Ellis, police surgeon, the old man told his story easily.
"I kill him sure," he said. "The docs, they always taking my blood. They starve me. I not sorry I kill the doc."
Other patients told police he was disturbed because he couldn't sleep Thursday night, and ascribed it to treatment by physicians.
Enrollment in Hawaii's schools is 85,000 this year, or 2,000 more than last year.

Mexico Moves to Arm Teachers As Number of Killings Mount Mexico City, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Federal Secretariat of Education, alarmed by the growing number of killings of rural school teachers, asked the War Department Thursday to allow teachers to arm for protection against violent measures of opponents of socialistic education.
More than twelve such killings have been reported in the past month, most of them in the states of Puebla, Morelos and Jalisco.
Several days ago two women teachers were attacked in Puebla by rebels, who cut off their ears and threatened them with death if they continued giving socialistic instruction.
Dispatches from Puebla Wednesday reported the leader of a band suspected of killing six teachers in the Texutilian district in a single day last week had been captured and shot by Federal troops.
Convinced that vigorous measures are necessary to halt the slayings, authorities placed his body on display in the plaza in Texutilian as a warning to other enemies of the official education.
Officials said the attacks on teachers were inspired by "fanaticism."
Two killings in Morelos have been attributed by officials to El Tallarin, insurgent leader who has evaded Federal pursuers for more than six months. He is accused of numerous raids on towns in Morelos and Juebla. Federal troops have nearly captured the elusive El Tallarin many times and wounded him at least once, but he always managed to escape.
The Government has contended that socialistic education, which became compulsory through a reform of the Constitution more than a year ago, does not attack religion but leaves the child free to choose whatever religion suits him and that parents are free to impart to their children any religious belief whatsoever.
That purpose, the Government officials state, is "to destroy the superstitions which prevent a child from really understanding the world and to give him a realistic and rational idea of things as they are."
Agitation against the program appeared to have died down, but it broke out again about a month ago with a number of isolated attacks on teachers. In Morelos, state education authorities called all rural teachers into Cuernavaca, the capital, following several killings. In other states officials appealed for Federal troops to provide protection for the teachers.
College News

Leroy Wilson and his orchestra will play for the Pan-Hellenic dance to be held this evening in the college gymnasium. The same orchestra will also play for the military ball Saturday evening.
With the addition of 14 new pledges a total of 104 students have been pledged to fraternities at Gettysburg college this year.
